

PINE BRANCH WILL CONTINUE FIGHT ON SITE FOR HOSPITAL

Association Votes to Renew Protest Against Fourteenth and Upshur Streets.

BORLAND AMENDMENT, TOO

Proposal to Admit Women to Membership Lacks Necessary Votes.

Decision to continue the fight against the location of the proposed Municipal Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets was reached at the first fall meeting of the Pine Branch Citizens' Association last night.

Another action taken was to vote down a proposal to amend the constitution so as to admit women to membership in the association.

Plans to reopen the fight against the Municipal Hospital location in the Pine Branch district were made when information reached members of the association that the District Commissioners are preparing, in their estimates to Congress next week, to renew their recommendation for location of their proposed hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets.

Charles P. McCurdy, chairman of the committee named to fight location of the hospital at that site, was instructed to urge the Commissioners to refrain from making this recommendation. It was decided also to seek the co-operation of John J. Egan, of the Board of Charities, in a campaign to keep the hospital out of Pine Branch.

Not Opposed to Hospital.

The association will not oppose the construction of the Municipal Hospital, but, on the contrary, will co-operate with other organizations in urging Congress to make the $500,000 appropriation for its construction on some site suitable to all.

Mr. McCurdy made it plain in addressing the association that the committee of forty from eight citizens' associations, of which he was chairman, did not defeat the item in the last District bill appropriating a half million for the hospital.

The bill as it passed the Senate naming a committee of five to select a suitable site, but stipulating that the hospital should not be built at Fourteenth and Upshur streets, was satisfactory to the citizens' committee, he said. The bill was defeated in conference against the wishes of the committee.

The Pine Branch association unanimously approved the resolution of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association opposing the Borland amendment, and urging its repeal. The association made no recommendations for street improvements, because of the Borland amendment.

Majority Favors Woman Members.

The proposal to amend the constitution to admit women to membership received a majority vote of 15 to 11, but failed of the necessary two-thirds majority. The vote can be brought up again at any time on thirty days' notice.

The District Commissioners were asked to recommend an eight-room addition to the West School, where half-day sessions are now necessary, due to overcrowding.

A resolution calling attention to polluting of the Sixteenth street reservoir was referred to the health committee. The following were elected to membership:

L. D. Kemom, Ulysses Butler, T. F. Langley, S. E. Veale, P. Birnie, Max Volberg, and the Rev. Mr. Douglas.

Salome Would Be a Suffragist Today, Avers Norma Tallmadge

Young Film Star Declares Ancient Princess the Original Vampire.

BUT SHE WOULDN'T BE NOW

Actress Thinks Judean Noblewoman Represented Restlessness of Her Sex.

Now that with the aid of Mr. Kipling and the motion picture, the verb "to vampire," has become a part of the English language, and now that with the aid of the various wall-eyed young women who wiggle and wobble, and wear their hair parted in the middle and call it acting, the business value of motion picture vampirism is being reduced every day, it is not unprofitable to go over the history of vampirism and consider just who holds the championship belt. This being, of course, the most appropriate thing that could designate a vampire championship as it frequently is a homely, but entirely complete description of her costume.

Young Norma Tallmadge, who is doing quite a few real and wholesome things in pictures—and who isn't a screen vampire in the accepted sense of the term at all—has given the matter much study, and she is of the opinion that Salome is entitled to the championship. At the same time Miss Tallmadge has a lot of nice things to say about Salome that will make her present day imitators feel proud of themselves.

"Salome comes pretty near being the original vampire lady of history, to my way of thinking," Miss Tallmadge writes The Times. "These modern creatures—ugh!—of motion pictures are tame compared to the tempestuous princess."

"Ancient Vamp Had Brains." These colorless tiger-skin ladies of modern days, when women have so many interests and professions, I cannot comprehend, but the wayward daughter of Herodias has come down through the ages quite understandable. Indeed, with all her almost barbaric lure of the olden days, she is quite modern.

"She symbolizes all the restlessness of the women of today. She had nothing to occupy her mind and morbid love crept into her thoughts instead. Jewels, cosmetics and masculinity were the only mental diversions of the day. Today, Salome would be president of a suffragette society, lecturing mere men from a street corner. Or she would be interested in settlement work. Poor girl! Salome was a victim of old-fashioned feminine limitations. And she would have made such a splendid suffrage leader!"

"I doubt if anyone has been more maligned than Salome. The popular conception of her is an undulating lady discarding her seventh veil to the music of a circus side show. In reality, she was a misunderstood young woman of royal blood—and a woman who could think, too."

Might Love Billy Sunday.

"The dramatists, likewise, have never given the burial Salome deserves. Sudermann in 'Johannes' made her a temptress who claimed the head of the prophet, because he met her advances with reproof. In fact, Sudermann conceded that Salome would have relented had the prophet been willing to ask of her his life. She was piqued and when a modern girl is piqued she would like the guilty person's head. If she could get it. We're all Salomes under the skin."

"Salome really was in the position of a modern princess who might fall in love with Billy Sunday. But, these days, she would forget about it in bridge, athletics, social activities or suffrage work. These modern vampires haven't a genuine reason for wanting Salome surrounded by a gilded and immoral, or rather immoral, atmosphere and the Town 'Todes' of Judea must have given the affair a lot of publicity."

Percy Helton's Career.

Percy Helton, the juvenile actor who so cleverly impersonates Tom Judson, the evangelist's son, in the film version of The Times serial story, "The Flavor of Faith," is a series of contradictions. He is twenty-three years old and looks sixteen. In three years he has been in things that to the heart of a boy. In the next he discusses old-time theatrical affairs with the familiarity of a man of fifty.

"I began my stage career twenty years ago on Christmas Eve," he relates, as though it happened last week, at Tony Pastor's. "I appeared in a sketch with my father, Alf. Helton, who was then and still is a comedian. Although I was only three years old at the time, I played a real part, and I have been playing parts ever since without interruption. My education has all been secured from private tutors, as I continued my stage work."

Escapes From Bandit.

VINELAND, N. J., Oct. 10.—By giving his horse a good "crack" with the whip last night, Yancey Dannels escaped a highwayman on the outskirts of the borough, who commanded him to stop. The police visited the scene and scoured the country, but failed to find the bandit.

FORESTRY EXHIBIT AT EL PASO EXPOSITION

Demonstration for Benefit of Farmers and Campers Will Be Given.

An exhibit devoted to forest windbreak planting, the preservative treatment of farm timbers, and the administration of the national forests in their relation to the farmers of the West has been prepared for the International Soil Products Exposition at El Paso, Tex., October 14 to 24.

The central feature of the display is a miniature growing windbreak made of young trees of the various species suitable for windbreak planting in the Southwest and properly spaced, as they would be in a full-grown shelter belt. Daily demonstrations of the proper manner of three planting will be given.

Two models of 100-acre farms, one in the North and one in the South, show proper location and composition of windbreaks.

Another feature of the exhibit will be an actual working model of two types of post-treating plants suitable for use by farmers in treating fence posts and other farm timbers with preservatives.

Many species of timber which rot quickly in contact with the ground, if treated with preservatives can be made to last three and four times longer than if left untreated.

The system of fire protection upon the national forests will be shown.

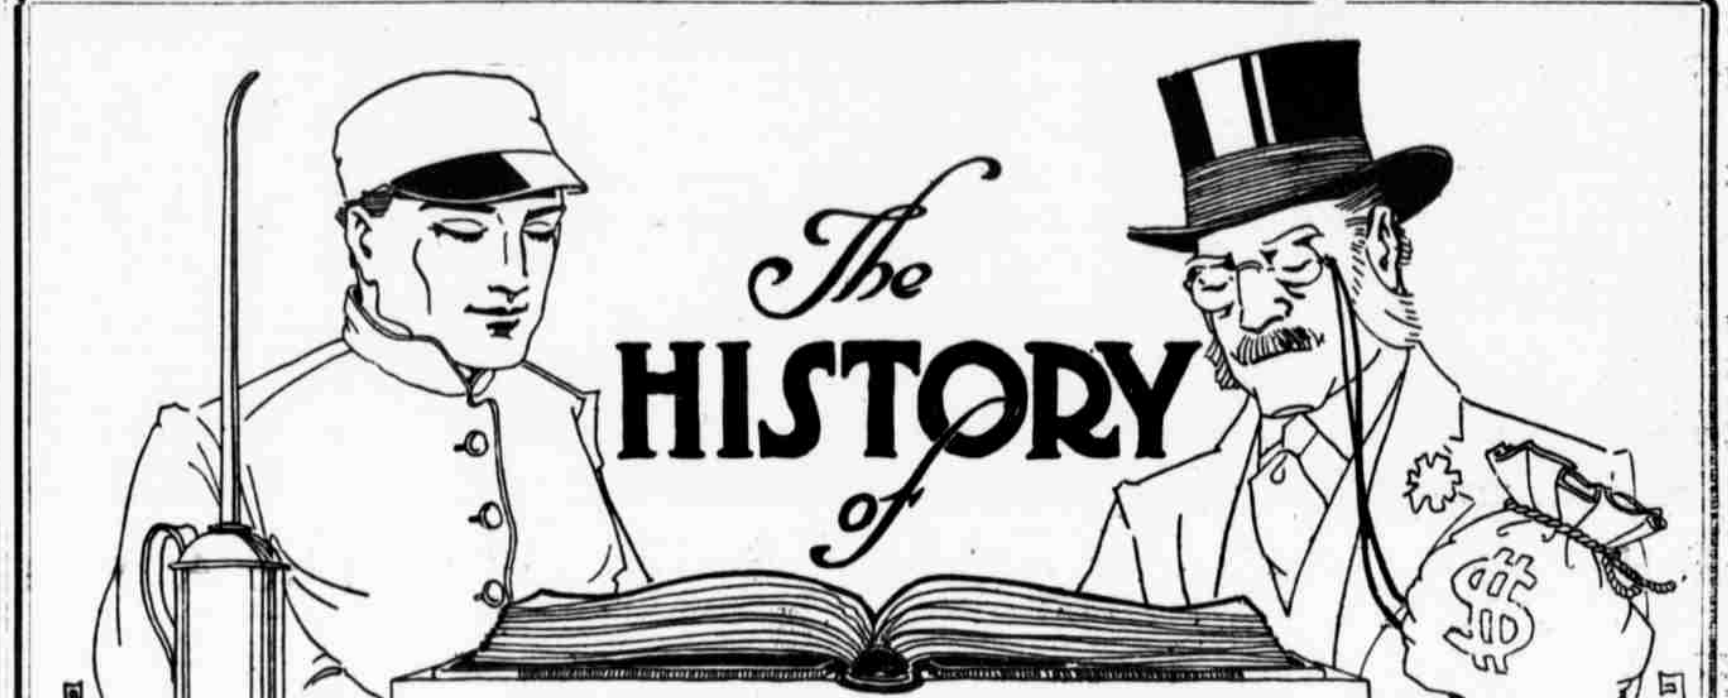

In this connection, a model camp is also shown, with a campfire built safely so as to prevent forest fires arising, as so many do arise from campfires improperly built.

A very live exhibit, which has attracted attention whenever shown and which is to be displayed at El Paso, is a working erosion model. This model demonstrates, by the use of water sprinkled on mounds of actual soil representing forested and deforested hills, the protection from soil erosion and floods afforded by a forest cover on slopes.

C. A. Lindstrom, of the Forest Service, will go to El Paso to take charge of the exhibit.

RAILROAD STRIKES

A Timely and Authoritative Account of Labor Disputes in the Steam Transportation Industry from the Earliest Times to the Present Day
By MARLEN PEW

Just a few weeks ago the country stood aghast as the prospect of a nation-wide railroad strike loomed imminent. Such a catastrophe was too big, too staggering, for the average mind to grasp. Yet, almost from the time when railroads first entered into commercial operation, there have been strikes among their workers. Riot and bloodshed have often followed in their wake, while commerce stood paralyzed.

Read this most timely article and you'll be in a better position to realize the full meaning of the crisis which was recently averted. It's in the

Railroad Man's Magazine

—the most unique periodical to be found upon the stands. No matter what your tastes in a magazine may be, you'll find them amply realized in this splendid publication.

LABOR TO WORK FOR WILSON RE-ELECTION

Central Union to Begin Active Campaign for the President This Week.

The Washington Central Labor Union this week will begin an active campaign for the re-election of President Wilson. Unqualified endorsement of the President was given by the Central Labor Union last night in a resolution, and the statement of approval was ordered sent to every State federation and every central body in American cities by Secretary John E. Colpoys.

The resolution was introduced by the legislative committee, N. F. Alfus, of the Machinists' Union, and John H. Lorch, of the stationary engineers.

It endorsed the President for his friendliness toward all laboring classes as expressed in the passage by the last Congress of the Clayton injunction act, the Seaman's bill, the Child Labor law, and the eight-hour bill.

The paragraph in the lengthy resolutions referring to the eight hour law characterized President Wilson as the greatest living apostle of minimizing a day's work to eight hours.

An embossed copy of the resolution will be sent to the President. The copies to be sent broadcast will urge all labor bodies to take action similar to that by the Washington laboring men.

Decides Horse Auctioneer Must Make Promise Good

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—If a horse auctioneer promises "your money back" when he knocks down an animal at a sale, he must make good the promise if the buyer is dissatisfied, according to a decision by the superior court.

John J. Hayes says he bought at a sale conducted by the D. P. S. Nicholas Company a horse which the auctioneer guaranteed. Hayes asserts the animal was "wind-broken" and demanded his money back. The municipal court turned down his claim, and he appealed to the superior court, where he won.

Cost Curtails Hunting.
